

ABSTRACT

A method of controlling a dissolution rate of a bioactive agent includes selecting a desired dot size corresponding to a target dissolution rate, and applying a bioactive agent to a delivery substrate in drops of solution configured
5 to form dots having the desired dot size on the delivery substrate.